

Open Letter

In view of the emerging serious threat to Agriculture for Food and Nutrition Security around the world due to COVID 19 pandemic, an Open Letter signed by over 170 eminent researchers, policy planners, and administrators have been written to the UN, G-20 Countries, and National Governments to draw their attention on a set of internationally coordinated, locally relevant actions. The current global health crisis has disrupted supply chains and hence the urgency to address the inter-related challenges of hunger, malnutrition, climate change, and environmental degradation and has emphasized the need for concerted, proactive and collective actions. The letter along with the list of signatories is given at the link provided below:
